George Kritikos
Laboratory Teaching Staff, University of the Aegean

Dr. Georgios Kritikos works as member of Laboratory Teaching Staff at the Learning Technology and Educational Engineering laboratory (ltee.aegean.gr) at the University of the Aegean. He holds a B.Sc. in Physics and a M.Sc. in "Electronic Physics and Radioelectrology (Telecommunications)" from Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He also holds a M.Ed. in "Modeling Design and Development of Educational Units" and a Ph.D. in Didactics of Physics using ICT from University of the Aegean. He has elaborated postdoctoral research at the University of the Aegean in the field of Educational Engineering. He was Science Teacher and director of the "Centre of Science Laboratory of Southern Dodecanese" at the Secondary Education of Greece. His research interests lie on the fields of Science Education, ICT for learning, Metacognition, Educational Engineering, Systems' Dynamics in Education etc. He has published articles in scientific journals as well as in greek and international conferences. More details at his personal website ltee.aegean.gr/gkritikos.